Summary

David Boles has an active, and wide-ranging, professional career arcing over 40 years. He was born a child actor in Lincoln, Nebraska and won awards for his singing, acting and dancing. During his teen years, he was a radio personality hosting the “Unique Youth” radio show on KFOR-AM 1240 and KFRX-FM X103. He was the weekly television “Teenaged Movie Critic” for KOLN/KGIN-TV’s “Kidding Around” and the “A Bolesful” segment.

During his high school and award-winning college career, David shifted into behind-the-scenes roles in Television, Film and the Live Stage as writer, director and producer for original productions like “The Westborough Crusaders” television series for Cablevision, “The Weeping Water Café” first produced on stage and then videographed for KPTM-TV. “A Stone’s Throw” was produced by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Department of Theatre Arts & Dance, and he directed and produced the award-winning art house film, “Watershed.”

As an award-winning graduate student at Columbia University in the City of New York, David turned to Playwriting, Script Doctoring and writing musicals. He worked with theatrical luminaries Liviu Ciulei, Eric Bentley, Howard Stein, Peter Stone, Marshall Jamison and Al Carmines.

While writing, directing and producing mega-media productions, David authors and publishes books about technology, American Sign Language, and provides editorial for other, pressing, human conundrums. He is a pioneer online educator, and he has taught, and created, programs of study, for in-person courses in ASL grammar, Dramatic Arts, Literature, Public Health, English Criticism
